

Moss Selections

Reindeer Moss

Reindeer Moss is a type of lichen, and the most popular type of moss we use because of its vibrant colors. From bright greens to warm yellows and orange-reds, reindeer moss is a beautiful choice for interiors.

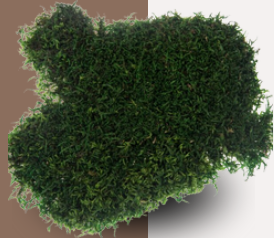

Typically used as a filler.

Deerfoot Moss

Deerfoot moss, also known as Cladonia rangiferina, is also a type of lichen that is commonly found in northern regions such as Scandinavia, Siberia, and North America. It is named for its resemblance to the shape of a deer's foot. Deerfoot moss has a much tighter texture and is very soft to the touch.

Typically used as a filler.

Sheet Moss

Sheet moss, also known as carpet moss, is a low-growing, dense moss that is characterized by its flat, sheet-like growth pattern, with individual fronds overlapping each other to create a continuous carpet-like appearance.

Used as highlights in the middle of pieces to bring contrasts

Mood Moss

Mood moss, also known as rock cap moss or Dicranum scoparium, is a common type of moss found in North America, Europe, and Asia. It is a small, delicate moss with thin, feathery leaves that grow in dense clumps.

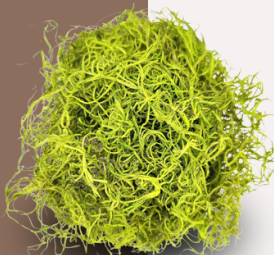

Creates texture and breaks up sheet moss.

Pool Moss

Pool (also called Pole) moss grows in a tight, round cushion-like mass and is an intense, vibrant green color. Pool moss has a premium and exclusive feel that will renew the look of your space with a vibrant, textural impact.

Used in areas without sheet moss to create movement and versatility.

Spanish Moss

Spanish moss, also known as Tillandsia usneoides, is commonly found in the southeastern US, Central America, and South America. Spanish moss is often used due to its long and flowing strands, which give a soft and delicate appearance. It can be arranged in different patterns and combined with other types of moss for a more textured look.

Creates texture, movement, and flow with its flowy strands.

Note: some moss have a strong initial smell that will fade over time.*
